INTRODUCTION.

As early as in the middle of May, it had become apparent to politicians of all shades of opinion, that the dissolution of parliament, at no distant day, was an inevitable circumstance. To such a point of certainty was the matter brought, that from one end of the kingdom to the other, candidates were issuing their anticipatory addresses to the constituencies.

Much excitement prevailed on the subject in the West-Riding. The address of Sir GEORGE STRICKLAND, Bart. declaring that "it was not his intention again to ask for the suffrages of the electors," was the first document issued; and it bears the date of the 21st of May. The next day a requisition was sent to Lord MILTON, bearing the signatures of Lord Surrey, and eleven or twelve influential gentlemen of the whig party, including seven members of parliament.

Lord MILTON's reply is also of the date of the 21st. His lordship briefly wrote—"The representation of the West-Riding is a station to which I have never presumed to aspire; but as it is your opinion that my compliance with your request will be conducive to the maintenance of those opinions which I believe to be essential to the welfare of the country, I feel it my duty to yield to your wishes, and to declare myself a candidate for the favour of the electors at the next general election."

On the 22nd, these three documents were issued throughout the Riding, as a placard, accompanied by a short appeal to the electors, from the pen of F. H. FAWKES, Esq. as chairman of the central committee of the whig party.

Lord MILTON's formal address to the electors was immediately issued, dated from London:—

TO THE GENTRY, CLERGY, FREEHOLDERS, AND OTHER ELECTORS OF THE WEST-RIDING OF YORKSHIRE.

GENTLEMEN,

As you are already aware of my having accepted an invitation to offer myself as a candidate for the West-Riding at the next general election, I deem it incumbent upon me to state my opinions on those more prominent subjects, which occupy the public attention at the present moment.

In the first place, I present myself to you as the advocate of free trade—I believe that the less our intercourse with foreign nations is restricted, the greater will be the scope afforded to the ingenuity of our artisans, the industry of our workmen, and the enterprise of our merchants. While I am of opinion that an alteration in the duties of Timber and Sugar will tend greatly to the comfort and enjoyment of the people; I am convinced that an alteration in the corn laws is essential to the welfare of all classes, and of none more than of the occupiers of the soil. Those laws, as now framed, obstruct our intercourse with other countries, enhance the price of bread during the times of scarcity, and induce the farmer to enter into engagements, which, in ordinary times, he is unable to fulfil.

My opinion on the subject of the amended poor law is, that its provisions are eminently conducive to the comfort of those who are objects of charity, while it protects the public purse against those who have no just claims upon it. If it requires amendment in any of its provisions, I am ready to consider whatever may be proposed with that view. I am decidedly of opinion that every security ought to be given for its being administered in tenderness to the poor. If such security does not now exist, I am desirous that it should be provided.

The endeavours of the present administration to establish a system of general education, meet with my entire approbation, and few things will give me greater pleasure than to be enabled through your favour, to forward their enlightened views on this subject.

To the issue of the contest I look forward with confidence, and in the mean time,

I have the honour to remain, Gentlemen,

Your most faithful and devoted servant,

MILTON.

These proceedings put the Conservatives on the qui vive; and the Hon. JOHN STUART WORTLEY thus addressed the electors:—

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE WEST-RIDING OF YORKSHIRE.

London, May 26th, 1841.

GENTLEMEN,

A dissolution of parliament is confidently stated to be near at hand, and in probability that I may be called upon to present myself again before you as a candidate, I have been urged to lose no time in addressing you thus publicly. If that call should be made as on previous occasions, I shall think it my duty to obey it, and I therefore feel, with those from whom this suggestion comes, that I cannot take too early an opportunity of submitting to you the opinions upon which alone I should presume to rest my title to your suffrages.

I would first offer my congratulations to my friends upon the recent announcement. One, at least, of our opponents has suddenly disappeared. The Whig leaders—the would-be “monopolists of the Riding,”—fancy they have another and a better resource—they have abandoned Sir George Strickland, who has been repeatedly chosen by the electors, and who has held the representation of the West-Riding for several parliaments, without complaint from those by whom he was elected, and they now rely upon the authority of a Noble Name, which I have no wish to disparage. I have not a word to utter against their new candidate, or his house, but we can understand the transaction. The party know that their case is hopeless, and they seek to blind you, by calling in the aid of a well-known influence to repair, if possible, their fallen fortunes. It is for you to say whether the representation of the West-Riding shall be thus disposed of. I have no fear of your decision. Like “the Budget,” it is their last shift, and like “the Budget” it will fail.

But it is now my business to lay before you my own opinions. In doing so I need not tell you it is not my intention to bid for your votes by promising attacks on all the existing laws and institutions of the kingdom; I avow that it is my wish to preserve, to strengthen, to improve them, and to apply improvement, not with a view to the interests of any one class of the community, any one portion of the population, but to those of the nation at large. On such points my principles have been so often already explained to you that they can scarcely be unknown, and perhaps I shall better meet your wishes if upon this occasion I devote such explanations as can be contained within the limits of an address to those subjects which appear at the present moment most prominently to engross the attention of all men—I mean what is called “Free Trade” and the New Poor Law.

First then of Free Trade. If this means what he who is quoted as the highest authority in its favor (Mr. Huskinson), meant by it, namely, the removal of prohibitions, and reliance on moderate protecting duties, of such amount only as might afford a fair competition and no more, then I profess myself its cordial friend. I voted with him because I saw that his measures were proposed with caution as well as knowledge, and with the power, as well as the honest wish to carry them. I approved the principles on which they were founded, and I approve them still. But if it means what that great authority more than once disclaimed, an abandonment of all protection to the great interests of this country, and a fruitless agitation of these questions with a view to the subversion of the great and complicated commercial system of the empire, then I reject it, like him, as an impracticable and mischievous delusion.

Under the name of Free Trade, however, the government have made three proposals for the alteration of important commercial regulations, and to these perhaps it would be better that I should apply myself, in order that upon them my opinions may be understood.

Of these the first is their plan for an alteration in the sugar duties. I object to that for two reasons, which appear to me to be conclusive.

First, without estimating too highly its effects upon slavery and slave trade, I cannot but think that any steps taken in that direction by Great Britain must have a tendency to counteract her efforts for the extinction of both.

Secondly, I am quite sure that we should not be justified in risking such a consequence at this moment for the sake of a mockery, for relief like that now held out, of three-fifths of a farthing on the pound of sugar, which I believe would not even reach the poor consumer of small quantities.

It has not been pretended that the proposal for an alteration of the timber duties (which I will notice next), would afford any very sensible relief to the distressed of the country. But I certainly will not undertake to say that no modification of them is feasible; nor without further information than I possess at present, whether this one is or is not admissible.

Next comes the question of the corn laws, on which I have often explained myself, and on which I have no change to profess. When asked to assist in repealing these laws, I have always refused, because I would not consent to abandon the entire agricultural interests of this kingdom. But I have never claimed more for those interests than a fixed and necessary protection, nor do I think that any thing beyond this can be justified. If, then, consistently with this principle, any relaxation of the existing duties is compatible, by all means let it be effected, and no one would more gladly aid in it than myself. I believe, however, a well adjusted scale rather than a fixed duty would be best both for the producer and the consumer. For the consumer, because when the price is highest, the check upon supply is lowest; for the producer, because the protection of a fixed duty would at those periods be most obnoxious when it was least required. In spite of arguments drawn from temporary variations of price and wages, I am firmly convinced that a lasting reduction of the price of corn must be followed by a serious fall of wages, so long as the supply of labour is not sufficient. That this deficiency of labour is not likely to occur, is clear, and it would be still less probable, if agricultural labourers were thrown out of their employment, or if the home market for manufactures were impaired by the impoverishment of the whole agricultural community. Let us not suppose that the question of the corn laws as merely that of landlords' rents; I have ever rejected that view of them as indefensible. They must be defended on consideration of the general interests of the community, or not at all. For my part I cannot forget that, besides the receivers of rents, there is the numerous class of small proprietors who receive none—of farmers to whom an immediate release from their contracts is impossible—of those who are employed by such classes—and I cannot consent to risk the ruin of all three, for the sake of a contingent advantage to some master manufacturers, by cheapening the labour which enters into the price of their productions. But what are we to think of ministers, who, having now been in power for nearly eleven years, during high prices of corn, during continued commercial distress, never breathed a proposal to change the corn laws? nay, from time to time declared themselves against it, till, finding themselves in a last extremity, they throw it out as a bait for popularity, with the knowledge that they cannot carry it; and with no intelligible motive, but that of raising an agitation embarrassing others, and preparing their own intended clamour when in opposition.

Lastly, we come to the new poor law, to which my objections remain unchanged, as well as to the administration of it by the commissioners, without casting any reflection on those gentlemen individually. It appears to me that they have shewn a disposition to carry out their theory with a speculative rigor ill calculated to mitigate whatever there was of harshness in the law, and in its operation on the poorer classes. I wholly disapprove of the principle that relief should, as far as possible, be confined to the workhouse, but hold, on the contrary, that the workhouse should never be made a condition where it can safely be dispensed with, for I cannot think that we are justified in lightly forcing the poor man from his home, because he is reduced to the assistance provided for him by law. I am dissatisfied with the bastardy clauses, with the great size of the unions, which appear to entail so much hardship on the pauper applicant. I cannot concur in the attempt to reduce the sustenance of the pauper to a level with the lowest destitution; nor can I consent so to administer relief as to discourage alms giving. But it appears clear that this law must undergo much alteration, to say the least, and I shall always approach the subject, whether it is to be altered or repealed with a deep conviction that the first principle to guide us in dealing with it is a tenderness for the poor.

I hope I have now made myself well understood on those important questions. I have extended this address beyond the usual limits in doing so. It has been my wish to be explicit, and I trust I have left nothing obscure, nothing ambiguous. But upon these, and upon other points, it will be my duty to afford whatever further explanations may be desired when the time arrives for me to appear before you.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient and faithful servant,
JOHN STUART WORTLEY.

On the 31st of May, a meeting of the Conservative Central Committee was held at the Strafford's Arms Hotel, Wakefield, under the presidency of the Hon. EDWIN LASCELLES, when it was resolved to thank Mr. WORTLEY for his address, and to assure him that the most determined and zealous efforts should be made to insure his return to parliament. At the same time and place, the chairmen of the several polling districts, having represented that the feelings of the Riding demanded a second candidate to be brought out, it was further resolved that "EDMUND BECKETT DENISON, Esq. be requested to become a candidate in conjunction with Mr. WORTLEY.

To such requisition, Mr. DENISON immediately complied, and his address of the same date, went forth to the constituency:—

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE WEST-RIDING OF YORKSHIRE.

GENTLEMEN,

A central meeting of the Conservatives of the West-Riding, having unanimously determined that a second candidate should be brought out at the approaching election, along with the Honourable John Stuart Wortley, and having, in terms most gratifying to my feelings, expressed an earnest wish that I would allow myself to be put in nomination, I have considered it my duty to comply with their request. I therefore now address you as a candidate for the honour of representing you in parliament.

I should indeed have much preferred remaining at home in the quiet discharge of my duties as a magistrate, and occasionally assisting in the promotion of the general interests and welfare of the inhabitants of the West-Riding. But I do not feel myself at liberty in a case of such importance as the present, to consult my own feelings, or to consider my own comforts. We have all duties to perform, and when duly summoned by those whom we respect, I think we are bound to obey.

You will, of course, expect some declaration of the principles which would guide me in case I should have the honour to represent you. It is scarcely necessary for me to say that I should adhere to the principles of the British Constitution as upheld by those who bear the name of Conservatives. I may add my conviction, that never was there a time when it was more incumbent upon the friends of the Constitution to bestir themselves, to counteract the insidious efforts of men who, for the sake of retaining office, use the powers of a government to excite agitation, and to endanger the peace of the country in its commercial and agricultural interests. It is obvious that the present government has long been a government only in name; continually obliged to bow to its Irish supporters, and for the sake of conciliation, to sacrifice its consistency and its declaration respecting the finality of the Reform Bill; whilst it has left to the Conservatives the task of declaring on what occasions the proper duties of the government should be applied to the requirements of the country. It is manifest from the late elections, from the divisions in the House of Commons, and from the feelings expressed by the country at large, that the kingdom is disgusted with the want of principle and the unfitness displayed by Her Majesty's ministers. Conscious of this, they have aimed at renewing the agitation of the Reform Bill by attacking the Agricultural, Colonial, and Shipping Interests; regardless of their last year's declaration of the wickedness of such a course.

Under the Reform Bill, the Whigs promised Retrenchment, Economy, and General Prosperity to the Kingdom. Let us test the promise by facts. Their boasted retrenchment has ended in the increase of the expenditure from £48,000,000 to £50,000,000; their economy has metamorphosed a surplus of One Million and a Half into a deficiency of Two Millions and a Half; and their promised prosperity is to be found in an unprecedented stagnation of trade and commerce.

The three propositions lately made by the Ministry, respecting Sugar, Timber, and Corn, exhibited a most shameless dereliction of principle. They well knew they could not carry any one of them, even through the House of Commons; but they hoped that the discussion might bring back some portion of their lost popularity, and damage their opponents. I am much mistaken if the eyes of the people are not at last opened to the various delusions which are annually got up for the amusement of the public and the retention of office by the performers.

It would doubtless be desirable to have sugar as cheap as possible, consistently with our pledge to abolish slavery, and to encourage the produce of free labour. But to admit slave-grown sugar at a low duty, appears to be holding out a new premium for the encouragement of the Slave Trade, after having paid upwards of Twenty Millions for its extinction.

With regard to the reduction of the duties on Baltic timber, it is quite clear that the time is badly chosen; for the governor of Canada says, such a step would add to his embarrassment, and would seriously injure our shipping interests.

The corn laws can only be maintained upon the principle of their contributing to the national welfare. If they operate merely to serve a class, however numerous that class may be, no good argument can be adduced for their continuance. Their object, however, is to secure the production of food for our own population, and to afford employment to our labourers. The scale of duties was contrived to allow the importation of foreign corn when our production was too limited, and to exclude it when our harvests were abundant. If the present scale of duties and mode of taking the averages do not answer their object, they ought to be revised and amended: but to make corn a subject of revenue would be both cruel and unjust. A fixed duty is nothing but taxation when foreign corn is equal in price to our own. If foreign corn is to be imported merely because it is cheaper, we must cease to grow more than a limited portion in England, become dependent upon a foreign supply, and thereby throw our agricultural labourers upon the manufacturing districts (already over-peopled) for employment. The corn law abolitionists themselves admit that to a great extent this consequence must ensue. If the import of foreign corn would greatly reduce the price of bread, that reduction would be immediately followed by Lower Wages, and the poor would suffer severely.

I have attended closely to the working of the new poor law. There are several parts of it which must be altered. The poor are practically left too much at the mercy of the relieving officer. The distance from the board of guardians is too great for old and sickly persons to travel.

The hasty laws hold out a direct temptation to seduction, by relieving the seducer from all charge unless the mother consents to remain in a poor house with her child. The workhouse test must frequently operate most harshly upon a labourer willing to work, but who can get no employment. He, with his family, is doomed to a workhouse in order to test his real destitution at a great cost to his parish; and there he must remain, until penniless he leaves its walls in search of work. This act, therefore, ought to be altered in several of its clauses, and I shall be most happy to co-operate in the amendment.

The education of the humbler classes is not sufficiently attended to by the state. There ought to be some provision made for their religious instruction, and I shall be the strenuous supporter of any measures for effecting so desirable an object.

I shall shortly have an opportunity of addressing the several classes of the electors, and affording them further explanation on the important topics on which I have touched, and answering any questions which they may think proper to put to me.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,

Your very faithful servant,

EDMUND BECKETT DENISON.

Doncaster, May 31, 1841.

Lord MORPETH did not issue his address to the electors, until the 8th of June:—

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE WEST-RIDING OF YORKSHIRE.

GENTLEMEN,

As a dissolution of the present parliament appears to be imminent, I think it my duty to acquaint you that, if you are pleased to renew the trust which I have already six times received at your hands, I feel myself bound by every motive of gratitude and respect to continue in your service.

The period during which that service has lasted, and the important events by which it has been tried, entirely dispense with the necessity of my putting forth, on the present occasion, any general statement of my political principles and conduct. The principles are the same as when they first won for me your support; of the conduct, it is not for me to talk, but for you to judge.

I feel, however, that both as a minister of the crown, and as your representative, I ought to put simply before you my view respecting the immediate cause of the approaching appeal to the people.—A deficiency exists in the public income; the national honor, faith, and safety, require that should be supplied; the only practical choice seems to lie between two modes of effecting this object. The one is, the imposition of new burdens; the other, the reduction of the present heavy duties upon imported articles of general consumption. The government have embraced the latter alternative. They venture to think that cheaper sugar, better timber, and more abundant and constant supply of corn, with the prospect of fuller employment and freer commerce, are preferable to fresh taxes, with the present import duties, and the present corn law. I do not wish to misstate, or exaggerate, or pervert the plain character of the question; but although I hear of two candidates having taken the field upon the opposite side, I think Yorkshiremen must be greatly changed indeed if they feel much doubt about their decision.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,

Your most grateful representative and attached servant,

MORPETH.

London, June 8th, 1841

The four candidates were now fairly in the field, and canvassing, by the friends of both the great contending parties, was carried on in the most energetic and determined manner throughout the length and breadth of the Riding—and beyond its limits; wherever, in fact, a voter could be found located. Every movement of the respective parties indicated that the struggle for victory would be severe.

The Queen did not prorogue parliament until Tuesday, the 22nd of June.—The proclamation for its dissolution on the 29th, appeared in a supplement of the Gazette on the following day. The writs for the new parliament were made returnable on the 19th of August.

On the 22nd, the four candidates addressed the electors at the Leeds Coloured Cloth Hall, and went from thence to Huddersfield. Subsequently they made the tour of the Riding for the same purpose.

On Monday, July 12th, the nomination of candidates took place at Wakefield, at the cattle market in the Ings, where a hustings had been erected. A vast concourse of people assembled, more than on any similar occasion in the same town. The Conservative candidates and their friends were first upon the ground, and were soon afterwards followed by Lords Morpeth and Milton, with their supporters. The right side of the hustings was appropriated to the Whig party; and the left to the Conservatives; the centre, intended for the High Sheriff, the Under Sheriff, and other officials, was likewise occupied by Mr. Pitkethley and Mr. George Julian Harney, (persons who assumed to be candidates on behalf of the Chartists) and their proposers and seconder.

The meeting was formally opened by the High Sheriff, FREDERICK VERNON WENTWORTH, Esq. The writ was then read by the Under Sheriff, and the oath to make a true and indifferent return administered to the High Sheriff. Whereupon, Lord Morpeth was proposed by Mr. Fawkes of Farnley, and seconded by Mr. James Lees of Delph;—The Hon. J. S. Wortley, by Godfrey Wentworth, Esq. of Woolley Park, and J. Brook, Esq. of Armitage Bridge;—Lord Milton, by Charles Wood, Esq. M.P. and J. B. Garforth, Esq. of Coniston hall;—and E. B. Denison, Esq. by the Hon. Edwin Lascelles and J. Rand, Esq. Messrs. Pitkethley and Harney were likewise proposed and seconded.

All the candidates addressed the electors at great length; after which, the High Sheriff, upon a show of hands, declared the majority to be in favour of Lords Morpeth and Milton.

A poll was then demanded on behalf of the Conservative candidates, and it was appointed to take place on the following Thursday and Friday.

The gross number of voters in the West-Riding who are upon the Register, amount to 30,998. Several additional polling places had been appointed since the last election. The following is the entire list:—

1 ABERFORD.	10 HOLMFIRTH.	19 RIPON.
2 BARNESLEY.	11 HUDDERSFIELD.	20 ROTHERHAM.
3 BIRSTAL.	12 KEIGHLEY.	21 SETTLE.
4 BRADFORD.	13 KNARESBOROUGH.	22 SHEFFIELD.

7 GILBURN.	16 OTLEY.	25 WAKEFIELD.
8 HALIFAX.	17 PATELEY BRIDGE.
9 HEBDEN BRIDGE.	18 PONTEFRACT.

The poll was kept open until four in the afternoon of the first day, and finally closed at four o'clock the following day—to which duration it is limited by the Reform Act.

The declaration of the poll took place on the following Monday, at the hustings in Wakefield, where the four candidates and their friends had assembled.—After the necessary formalities had been gone through, the Sheriff declared the poll to be—

For the Hon. J. S. WORTLEY.....	13,165

Majority of Mr. WORTLEY over Lord MILTON.....	1,085
Majority of Mr. DENISON over Lord MORPETH.....	749
Majority of Mr. DENISON over Lord MILTON.....	700

These statements were painted on boards, and separately held up to the gaze of the crowd.

The High Sheriff then declared the Hon. John Stuart Wortley, and Edmund Denison, Esq. to be duly elected Knights of the Shire, to serve in Parliament for the West-Riding of Yorkshire.

The Under Sheriff then read the Indenture of Return, which was signed by the Sheriff and other gentlemen. A vote of thanks was moved to the Sheriff by the Hon. J. S. Wortley. The court was then dissolved. The successful candidates were chaired through the town, accompanied by the largest procession ever witnessed in Wakefield.
